Columbus wrote a letter to King Ferdinand of Spain detailing the results of his first voyage. Using the given excerpts, answer the questions which follow.

"I have taken possession of a large town, to which I have given the name Villa de Navidad, and in it I have made fortifications and a fort, which now will be by this time entirely finished, and I have left in it sufficient men for such a purpose with arms and artillery... and a great friendship with the king of that land, so much so that he was proud to call me, and treat me, as a brother."

Question # 1

What was the accomplishment of Columbus?

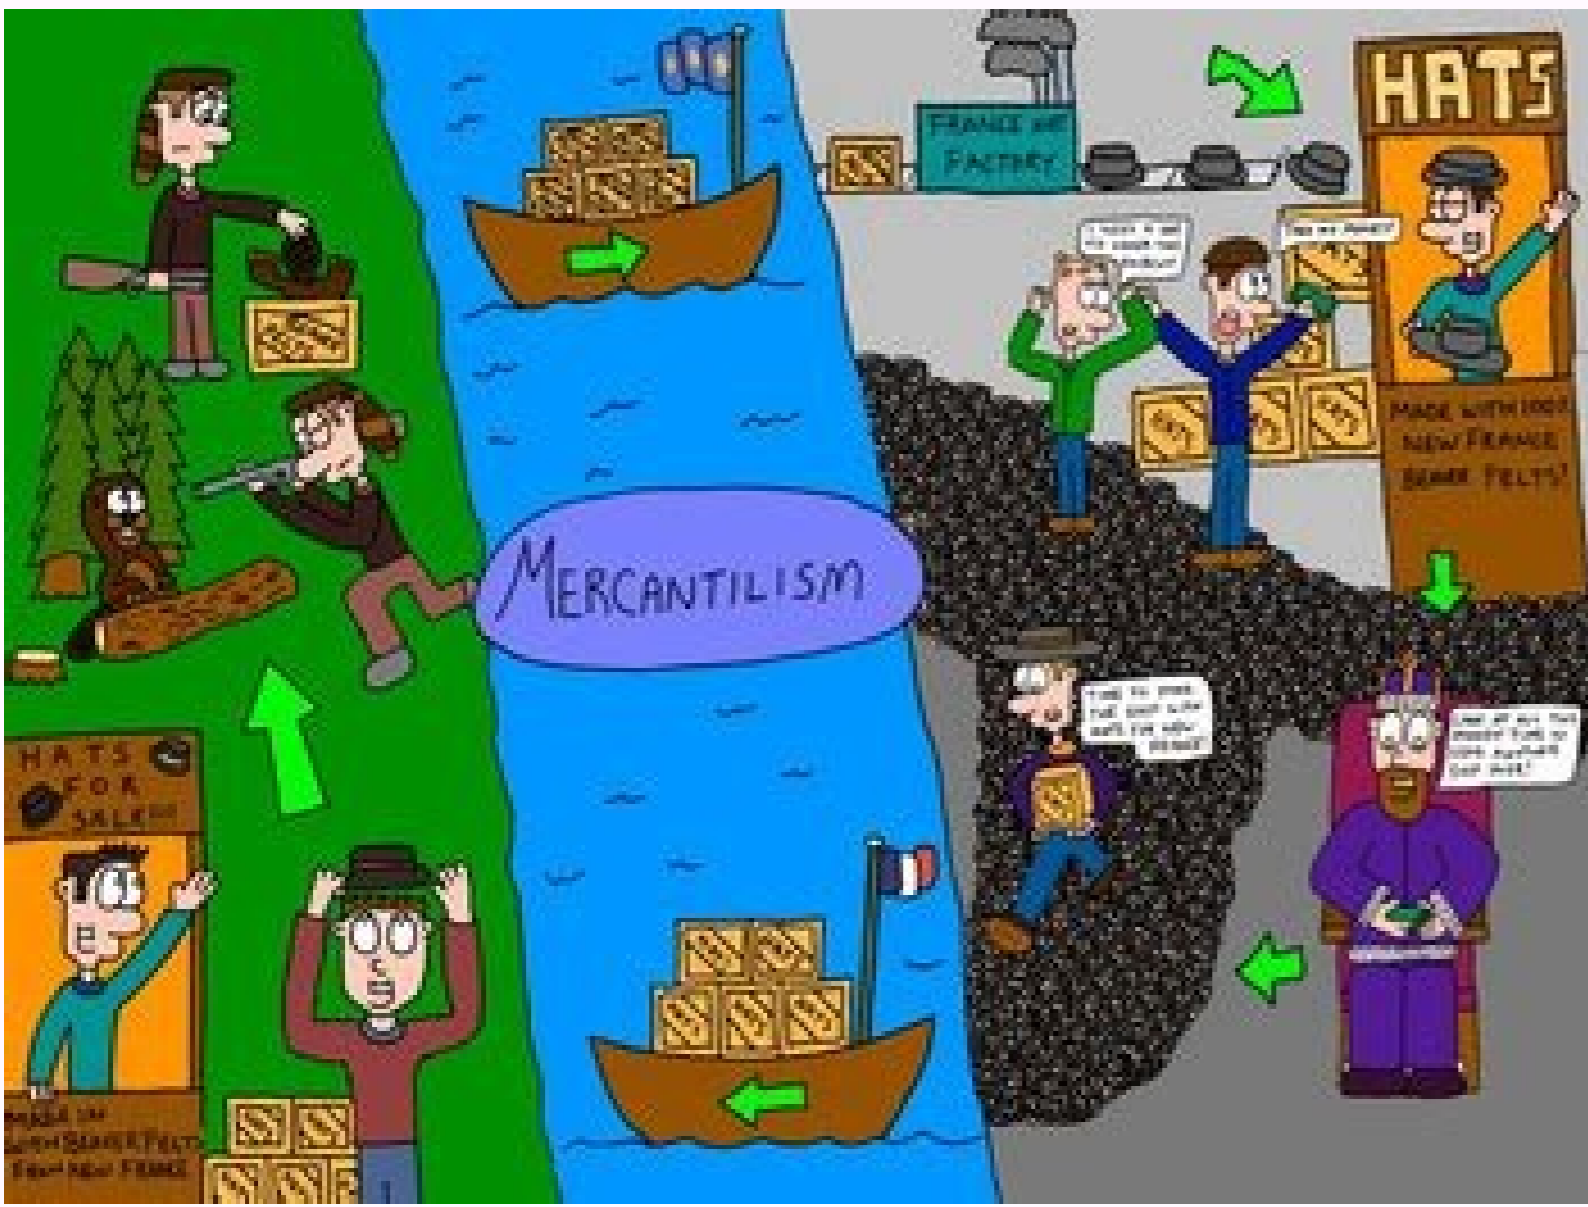

"The people of this island and of all the other islands which I have found and of which I have information, all go naked, men and women, as their mothers bore them, although some of the women cover a single place with the leaf of a plant or with a net of cotton which they make for the purpose. They have no iron or steel or weapons, nor are they fitted to use them. This is not because they are not well built and of handsome stature, but because they are very marvellously timorous"

Question # 2

What was the implication of Columbus' description of the native population?

-Letter of Christopher Columbus to King Ferdinand II of Spain

I am a fairly laid back homeschooler in that we do not follow one method of study, but probably relate most closely with unschoolers. However, I love taking cues from my kids and following down rabbit holes of exploration and imagination. I do not remember a lot of information I supposedly learned in my elementary years and I don't want my children to be the same way. I want them to learn about what interests them for however long it interests them, hopefully ensuring they will remember more than I did. However, with this method of study, it often means we spend anywhere from several weeks to months on a specific topic. History is one of those subjects we study based on what interests my children. Many times these topics come about from current events and how we, as a country, "got here". Recently my children have been asking more and more about the colonial times. They loved learning about the Pilgrims and their journey to America back at Thanksgiving and even though I thought we finished studying them, they continue to ask more questions. So I decided maybe we needed some more printables and activities to keep learning a little while longer! Here are a number of printable worksheets that help students gain an understanding of life on the colonies. They will require that your students take a good bit of time to take in the history that is needs to sink in here. Teacher Resources On This Theme Related Bulletin Board Printables Camp Cannon Flag Plan March History of Colonial America The United States did not always have 50 states. Before the United States existed, there were 13 states in America. These states belonged to the Europeans and were part of the Colonial America. Life was very different for Americans who lived at this time. They did not have any right to rule themselves and the British controlled all the laws of the states. There was a different colonial American flag too! Colonial America ended after the American Revolutionary War. When Was Colonial America? Colonial America lasted from the 15th to the 18th century. It started when Spanish explorers found the Americas and decided to take over the land. They wanted to use the resources of the land for themselves. When the colonies started to get rich, the British feared they would lose control over them. They decided to put heavy taxes on them. The Colonies of Colonial America These were the different areas that the early British settled in. The 13 states became the first 13 colonies. Some prominent colonies are listed below. Roanoke This was the first colony on the American map. But there is mystery surrounding this particular colony and is considered lost. All the settlers magically disappeared. It is speculated that they couldn't survive in their initial spot therefore they moved on to other places. But the British interestingly couldn't locate them. Plymouth The settlers who came to Plymouth wanted to find religious freedom. After a difficult journey across the Atlantic Ocean, they settled at Plymouth. These settlers lived peacefully with the Native American tribes already living in the area. Williamsburg This settlement was the first properly planned one. It had its courthouse, church, and market square. Virginia was the capital of Williamsburg. It's also where most of the fighting took place during the American Revolution. Jamestown Jamestown wasn't easy to settle in. The British had to fight with the Native Americans living there. The land was also hard to live on, and they got many diseases. The best tobacco crop came from here. However, after countless challenges, the settlers gave up and moved the capital to Williamsburg. What Was Life Like? Life in Colonial America was very different from now. Here are some of the things people did every day. City In the city, people worked all day long. They weren't rich; they usually worked simple jobs as merchants or blacksmiths. The kids went to school and people went to church every Sunday. There were enslaved people in the city too. They usually worked as maids or house workers. Men discussed business in taverns, and dancing was popular. Farm Life Men and women worked hard in the fields all day on farms. They had to do everything by hand. They would always be planting or picking a harvest. There were no tractors or machines! There were no schools in the countryside. Most enslaved people had to work on farms. Houses Houses were simple-looking. Early homes were made of wood and had thatched roofs. Later, plantation owners had fancier houses made in different styles. City homes were built well. The best and the biggest homes were mansions that belonged to the British. Jobs People in Colonial America were tradesmen. One family could do a single trade for decades! It was passed on from father to son. There were jobs for shoemakers, tailors, blacksmiths, and even wigs. Women Life in Colonial America was traditional. Everyone had traditional roles in the family. Fathers earned money and mothers did housework. Children were rarely sent to school. Most of them learned what their fathers did. Women weren't allowed to work in Colonial America. Major Events of Colonial America A lot was going on at this time. From wars to witch trials, people in Colonial America were always busy. Wars France and Britain wanted to control the American colonies. They both sided with different tribes. The war was fought in British and French colonies and it lasted almost 9 years. In the end, the British won. In the treaty, they got full control of colonial North America. Voyage of Mayflower This was a massive ship full of people from England going to America. The ship had no bathrooms! They had to travel a very long journey before reaching America. People brought animals with them too. Witch Trials In the town of Salem, people started accusing each other of being a witch. Many people died in the trials. This was because the Church had a lot of power in some areas of the Colonial America. Major Figures of Colonial America There were many important figures from this time who have been immortalized in history books. John Smith and Pocahontas Everyone knows the story of Pocahontas. John Smith set up the Jamestown colony in an area already heavily inhabited by the Native Americans. The British needed their help if they wanted to survive as they did not know how to hunt for food. The Native Americans didn't like the British and their conflict led to Smith being captured. Smith had befriended Pocahontas who convinced her Native American community to let him go. Who was William Penn? William Penn wanted a place for Quakers in North America. Did you know that Pennsylvania was named after him? He got permission from the King of England to find a place for his people. Many Quakers moved there together. They wanted everyone to be able to practice their religion there. Learning about Colonial America will help you understand why Independence Day is important. Life in Colonial America was very different. They had simple jobs in the city and worked on farms all day in the countryside. The Colonial America map looked very different too. It was divided into colonies instead of states. This is an important period of US history; it will show you how these colonies became what they are now.
